Jones Foundation Contributes $100,000 Grant

The Harvey and Bernice Jones Foundation of Springdale, Ark., has contributed $100,000 to Harding's School of Nursing, according to President David Burks.

The gift will be used over the next two years to purchase new equipment in the School of Nursing's Learning Resource Center. Scheduled to be purchased are computer hardware and software, patient simulators and audiovisual materials.

"We certainly appreciate the interest and financial support Mrs. Jones and the Foundation have given to Harding's nursing program," said Burks. "This pace-setting gift will allow our nursing students to be introduced to the latest technology while strengthening their clinical skills and professional knowledge."

Dr. Burks and Don Shores, a member of Harding's Board of Trustees, presented the funding proposal to Mrs. Jones for the School of Nursing project.

A major component in the School of Nursing's plan for the future involves the Learning Resource Center (LRC). Harding's curriculum has always had a strong clinical focus. The LRC is central to the curriculum and has been present since the school's inception in 1975.

The LRC encompasses all learning materials which pertain to the curriculum; it includes three separate simulation laboratories for audiovisuals, skills and computer learning needs.

The center is used extensively by students and faculty to prepare for clinical experiences. Currently, most of the equipment, hardware and software, is over 13 years old.

"Modernization of the computer laboratory involves obtaining microcomputers to introduce students to computer capabilities utilizing computer assisted learning, patient simulations, word processing, data base management and spread sheets," said Dr. Cathleen Shultz, dean of the School of Nursing. "Modernization of the audiovisual lab involves obtaining current equipment and update audiovisuals."

"This gift will enable Harding's nursing program to attract more students and prepare a more competent practitioner, benefitting students, patients, and employers in the state of Arkansas. With the modernization of the Learning Resource Center, Harding's clinical simulation will be comparable to the nursing program at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences campus in Little Rock."

Mrs. Jones and her late husband, through their foundation, have had a long history in the support of medical and educational projects in Arkansas.

Earlier this year with a $1 million gift to the Arkansas Center for Eye Research at the University of Arkansas Medical Sciences campus, the "Harvey and Bernice Jones Chair in Ophthalmic Research" was established.

Harvey Jones served 19 years as president of the Springdale School Board. The Foundation annually awards scholarships and has extended support to public schools in the Springdale area and other educational institutions throughout the state. Jones died at age 88 March 30.

Harvey and Bernice Jones established a trucking company that developed into a major competitor in the trucking industry in the South and Southwest.

One of the Foundation's most ambitious undertakings was the establishment of Harbor Village near Grove, Okla., on the Grand Lake of the Cherokees. In an effort to preserve "our forefathers' lifestyle" for future generations, they personally selected most of the authentic collections and antiques that fill the 100-building complex. In 1988 more than a half million people toured the facility without charge.

Lectureship Draws 700 Participants

About 700 visitors from outside Searcy joined local guests, students, faculty and staff for the 66th annual Bible Lectureship in early October for in-depth studies on the Book of Acts. Musical presentations by student groups, special luncheons and dinners, mission reports and organizational reunions also were included in the series.

"The quality of the classes and lectures was excellent," said Dr. Carl Mitchell, Dean of the College of Bible and Religion, "and reflected much thought and study on the part of the presenters." A faculty of more than 50 speakers appeared in the three-day series, entitled, "Acts, the Spreading Flame."

"The format of an in-depth look at a particular book is very popular and leaves room for some long-term benefit," Mitchell said in announcing that the policy will be continued. Next year's lectures, set for Sept. 30-Oct. 3, will explore the book of 1 Corinthians with a theme, "The Church of God in a Pagan World."

'Competitive Colleges' Lists Harding

Peterson's Guides has selected Harding for inclusion in the ninth edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges which will be published in the spring of 1990.

Peterson's Guides is the Princeton-based publisher of education and career reference materials. The announcement of Harding's selection was made by Dr. Jim Carr, executive vice president.

The new edition of the reference volume presents comparative data on 329 colleges that consistently have more undergraduate applicants with above-average capabilities than they can accept. Harding was one of only two Arkansas schools selected for the list.

Together with 32 art and music schools that have highly selective acceptance rates, this group of 329 colleges represents approximately 10 percent of all American institutions of higher education.

"We are certainly excited about being listed in this prestigious guide of select colleges and universities," said Carr. "Harding's selection by this publication is indicative of the school's academic reputation as well as the quality of the high school graduates who are applying for admission. The selection is also just another indication that Harding is a 'high demand' institution."

Factors considered by the publishers of the guide are the ratio of the number of applicants to the number of students accepted; the percentage of freshmen who scored over 600 on both their SAT math and verbal exams, or over 26 on the ACT; the percentage of freshmen who scored over the national average on the respective tests; and the percentages coming from the top half and the top tenth of their high school class.

Full pages describing each college are presented in an easy-to-use format and include such information as high school rank and test scores of freshmen, academic resources and special programs, percentage of applicants who were accepted, costs and financial aid, and majors.

Competitive Colleges, ninth edition, will be available in bookstores or direct from Peterson's Guides, Princeton, N.J.

"God Are You Really There?" Series Released

by Alice Ann Kellar

Dr. Don England has a reputation and rapport with students in his college classes that have won for him the designation of Distinguished Professor of Chemistry. In a recently-released six-segment video series called "God Are You Really There?", he has re-directed his teaching thrust toward pre-college age students.

The new series, co-sponsored by Harding University and 20th Century Christian of Nashville, is designed to help teen-agers in their search for God. The work has been tagged as an excellent tool to combat the young Christian "dropout" problem by helping teens develop a strong personal faith.

Rubel Shelly, minister of the Ashwood Church of Christ in Nashville who also appears in the video segments, said, "Dr. England will help young people see that reason and evidence are allies to Christianity."

The set contains two video cassette tapes with six 20-minute classroom segments, a student book and a teacher's guide. Topics range from "Faith That Overcomes Doubt," "Believing in God Makes Sense" and "What Have I Done To Deserve This?" on one division to "The Humanity and Divinity of Jesus," "Can I Trust My Bible?" and "Can a Modern Scientist Believe the Bible?"

In the accompanying book and teacher's guide are 13 chapters with subdivisions suitable for a three-month or longer classroom study.

England completed the manuscript during the summer of 1988 in what he has termed "one of the hardest tasks I ever attempted." A deeply committed, serious, intelligent man known for his dedication to any challenge, England established a deadline for the manuscript and devoted his waking hours to the task.

"At times I became so weary I couldn't sit at my computer any longer so I knelt on pillows in front of the screen," he said. "The book is sent forth with the prayer and expectation that Christian faith will be triumphant in the lives of those who consider it." Part of his concern was keeping the message in clear form. "Some of my favorite words are not even in the book," he added.

video had a deadline, also, as England and his wife, Lynn Alexander England (BS '60), a member of the home economics faculty, were scheduled for a semester at Harding University in Florence (HUF) in the spring of 1989. "I was really ready for that time to arrive," he said.

A native of Tennessee, England received the B.S. in chemistry and mathematics from Austin Peay University in Clarksville, Tenn. He holds the Ph.D. in organic medicinal chemistry from the University of Mississippi. England joined the Harding faculty in 1960 and received Distinguished Teacher awards in 1968, 1973 and 1983 to be designated a Distinguished Professor. He has written two other books, A Christian View of Origins, and A Scientist Examines Faith and Evidence. He serves as an elder at the College Church of Christ.

The professor is a wood-carver and wood sculptor who makes and plays the dulcimer. He also enjoys fishing. The Englands have two children, Donna, who received the B.S.N. from Harding in August, and Mark, a sophomore currently.

The "God Are You Really There?" series is available at the Harding University Bookstore at $149.95. Student books are $6.50 each. Further information may be obtained by writing the bookstore at Sta. A, Box 927.

From the President

David Burks

During the faculty conference at Camp Tahkodah at the beginning of this school year, one of our senior students, Louise Tucker, told the faculty members students of this year were serious about doing good and serving. She was right.

Already this year students have raised money for the Hurricane Hugo disaster relief, His House (benevolent outreach of the College Church), Italian campaigns (Galaxy and Ju Go Ju), books for Jamaica, and medical funds for Mark Berryman, a missionary.

A special effort was made to raise funds and to work with patients at the Pediatric Care Unit in Little Rock by the Student Association and social clubs. Clubs have also conducted special projects for the Sunshine School in Searcy and the Morrilton Children's Home. The Dietetics Club and five social clubs worked together to coordinate a special world food day project.

The Resident of the Month project with a local nursing home and the Blue Ribbon Day for the Sunshine School which is conducted by the Social Work Club continue to be highlights for the student body as residents are honored in chapel each month. The Student Association also arranged a special Halloween party for local children which was a great success.

JOY and the Student Association Spiritual Life Committee have conducted devotionals on campus each week and are planning a second annual all-student lectureship for the spring. Over 600 students are working with the CREW as volunteers in service in Searcy, and more than 300 students are working with His House as volunteers. About 250 students are meeting weekly in preparation for International Campaigns.

These students are involved in worthwhile projects. We are glad they are at Harding! They are making a difference in a very positive way.

New Admissions Requirements Adopted

Harding's faculty has adopted new admission requirements for incoming freshmen. The new standards will be come effective for freshmen enrolling for the 1992-93 school year.

The new requirements parallel a nationwide trend called "core or more" curriculums in high schools. Many colleges and universities throughout the nation have gone to requiring prescribed high school curriculums.

High school graduates applying for the 1992-93 school year should have completed at least 15 units in academic subjects. Specifically, an applicant should have completed four units of English, three units of mathematics (taken from general math, geometry, algebra I, algebra II, trigonometry, pre-calculus or calculus), three units of social studies (taken from civics, American history, world history or geography) and two units of natural science (taken from physical science, biology, physics or chemistry). Although not required for admission, two years of foreign language are recommended. Additional units may come from any academic area.

A student who has not met the above requirements, but has a 3.0 grade average and an ACT score of 21 or has an SAT combined score of 840 can be considered for unconditional admission. Students who do not meet the curriculum requirements or scores necessary for unconditional admission must be reviewed by the admissions committee.

Explaining the rationale for the new requirements Dr. Jim Carr, executive vice president, said, "Our research shows that the stronger the high school curriculum the better the student will do in the classes at Harding. The faculty believes strongly in the new requirements and voted unanimously to adopt them."

He pointed out the new standards are not much different from what are being recommended for students entering today. The current university catalog stresses the "core or more" approach.

High school graduates should have completed at least 15 units in academic subjects. Specifically, an applicant must have a minimum of three units in English and nine units from other academic courses such as mathematics, science, social science and foreign language. The remaining three units may be from other high school courses.

These course requirements represent the minimum number of units necessary to be considered for admission. Most candidates for admission will more than meet these requirements and all prospective applicants are strongly urged to take the most rigorous class work available in high school.

"Harding has a limited number of positions available each year for freshmen," said Carr. "We must admit those applicants who have the best chance of successfully completing their degree requirements at Harding."

He stressed the university will continue to recruit and enroll students with high moral values, leadership potential and extracurricular interests and involvement.

The new requirements were adopted in October, but will not become effective until the fall of 1992. The delay in implementing the standards will allow high school freshmen and sophomores time to adjust their coursework to meet the new requirements.

Campus Notes

Louise Bradford and Dorothea McDowell (Nursing) attended the Arkansas State Nurses Convention Oct. 26-27 at the State House Convention Center in Little Rock. Bradford presented "Personality Disorders" for Little Rock area practicing registered nurses at the Veterans' Hospital Nov. 1.

Twenty-two Harding students took part in a pilot missions internship program in Nairobi, Kenya, this summer. Students formed three groups and spent six weeks campaigning in Nairobi, observing missionaries' work in Eldoret, and surveying people groups in Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda.

Seven-year veteran missionary Monte Cox, who spent last year at Harding as the visiting missionary for the school, returned to Kenya with the student group and along with Mark Berryman and Lloyd Deal made travel and work arrangements for the students.

The program is scheduled to continue next summer with up to 40 students traveling to Kenya, training for several days at a retreat center, doing evangelistic work in metropolitan areas, and observing missionaries when they go out to preach and visit newly established churches.

Berryman will base his efforts in Searcy this fall and in the spring of 1990 and can be reached at 503 E. Center, Searcy, AR 72143.

Dr. Cathleen Shultz, dean of the School of Nursing, has had a research manuscript accepted for publication in the Journal of Women and Aging.

The article summarizes her three-year research on loneliness and the elderly.

Co-investigators with Shultz were three faculty members of the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences. Joining Shultz in the study were Cornelia Beck, associate professor for research in the College of Nursing; Chris Walton, project director in the College of Nursing; and Robert Walls, professor in the College of Medicine.

Shultz presented her findings to the National Gerontological Society at the organization's meeting at Minneapolis in November. She will also report on her research in December at the annual research conference of the Southern Council on Collegiate Education in Nursing and in February at the meeting of the Southern Research Society.

Jim White, director of admissions services, was elected vice president for admissions administration of the Arkansas Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (ArkACRAO).

He was elected for a two-year term at the organization's annual meeting in October.

White will serve on the executive committee and will be responsible for admissions committees within ArkACRAO.

Four Harding marketing majors and Dr. James Ferguson, associate professor of marketing, developed a marketing plan for the Heritage Inn and Conference Center. The four seniors applied their classroom skills to a practical marketing problem. Pictured with Ferguson are (l-r): Bill Tripp of Lancaster, Ohio; Lynette Stow of Tulsa; Sharon Coleman of Fishers, Ind., and Brett Ferguson of Dexter, Mo. The development of the marketing plan was a project conducted during the fall semester.

White will also represent the organization at admissions meetings throughout the state.

Update, a publication of Southwestern Bell, featured Harding and its newly installed telecommunications system in the fall issue of the publication.

The feature article outlined Harding's use of a Northern Telecom system to help control communications and long distance expenses. Harding has installed its own communications cable and manages its own cable plant.

This fall every dorm room at Harding got local phone service for only $40 per semester. Students also can get voice mail on a limited basis for an additional $15 per semester.

Update is published to help business managers keep abreast of economic and communications developments.

Tod Martin, a 1984 Harding alumnus, has been named assistant to the dean of the School of Nursing.

The marketing major will assist Dean Cathleen Shultz in the day-to-day administrative functions of the School of Nursing. One of his primary responsibilities will be student recruiting.

Martin, 28, has five years' experience in retail management with Beall-Ladymon Department Stores in Louisiana and Dillard's Department Stores in Texas.

While a student at Harding, Martin was a member of Belles and Beaux, the Society for the Advancement of Management, the American Studies Program and Delta Mu Delta, the national business honor society.

He is married to the former Dana Marie Jones of Beaumont, Texas.

Dr. Richard Oster of the Harding Graduate School of Religion in Memphis has been admitted into the European based Society of New Testament Studies. Membership in the SNTS is based upon nomination and a commensurate standard of academic publications.

Oster has taught at Harding Graduate School for 11 years, and his academic publications, including a recent article appearing in New Testament Studies, focuses upon areas of contact between the historical and cultural backgrounds of the New Testament and the interpretation of New Testament Scriptures.

Only five Americans are enrolled annually in SNTS. Dr. Oster is the only person who teaches at a university or other academic institution associated with Churches of Christ to hold membership in the SNTS.

The Society of New Testament Studies was created prior to World War II by a group of British and Continental New Testament scholars. Following the war the Society resumed its meetings and began publishing its own scholarly journal entitled New Testament Studies.

Chorus Campaigns '90

Former members of the A Cappella Chorus and the Chorale are encouraged to participate in Chorus Campaigns '90, joining current members of the Harding University Chorus as they sing and work in France, Belgium, the Netherlands, England, Scotland and Wales. This is the sixth trip the group has made overseas since 1979.

In each location the Chorus will be working to strengthen and encourage local Christians. This will sometimes involve distributing literature and singing in shopping areas, but the primary focus of the trip will be presenting more formal concerts sponsored by the host churches. These concerts have proven to be valuable tools for developing new contacts for the churches, improving community relations, establishing ties with community leaders and encouraging church members.

Each participant will be required to raise $1,300 to join the campaign group, which will leave Little Rock on May 14 and return on June 12. For more information, write Dr. Cliff Ganus III, Box 877, Harding University, Searcy, Ark. 72143, or call (501) 279-4311.

Alumni Recognized During Homecoming '89

Five Harding alumni were honored by the university and its various divisions during Homecoming activities held the weekend of Oct. 27-28. Each received a framed certificate and a commemorative paperweight bearing Harding's seal. The respective deans made the presentations during the annual Black and Gold banquet on Friday night, Oct. 27.

Honored as Outstanding Alumni were Ted Lloyd of Searcy and Michael O'Keefe of Edmond, Okla., representing the College of Arts and Sciences; Charles Coil of Florence, Ala. for the College of Bible and Religion; Eunice Hogan of Troy, Tenn., for the School of Education; and Don Helms of Russellville, Ark., for the School of Business.

George Tipps Is Distinguished Alumnus

George Tipps, a 1945 graduate and retired minister, was honored at Harding's Black and Gold banquet as the Distinguished Alumnus for 1989.

Tipps studied Bible, history and biological science while at Harding. He began his career as a biology teacher at Abilene Christian College. Following a year of teaching, Tipps began his ministerial work when he moved to Washington, D.C. and worked with the 14th Street Church of Christ as assistant preacher and song leader. Three years later Tipps became a full-time pulpit minister for a congregation in Louisville, Ky.

Tipps continued his preaching at congregations in Jackson, Tenn., and Tulsa, Okla., and he has spent 28 years serving in the Ft. Worth area. He retired from full-time preaching in 1985 after 39 years of service and is presently working with the eldership at the Whiterock Church of Christ in Dallas.

Retirement has not lessened the activities in Tipps' schedule. He continues to hold meetings and preaches by appointment. An active member of the Rotary Club of Dallas, Tipps has helped establish clubs in Mexico City and Tokyo in his role as international service chairman for the club. He also works with the School of Biblical Studies in Mexico, the British Bible School in Corby, England and is on the board of directors of the Ft. Worth Christian School and College. Tipps was also instrumental in forming a Christian retirement center in the Dallas area.

Tipps and his wife, Claire, have three children, Sheri Shearin of Searcy, Beverly Mayhall of Oklahoma City, and David Tipps of Conway. They are the proud grandparents of seven grandchildren.

George Tipps receives congratulations from alumni attending the Black and Gold banquet.

Dr. Ray Muncy Finds Time To Write

In addition to his teaching duties, speaking engagements and responsibilities as chairman of Harding's testing and social science department, Dr. Ray Muncy is somehow finding time to research and compile data for what will be the third book he has authored.

Entitled Filling the Ancient Measure, the book gives a historical account of the Church of Christ in Indiana. The research stage has just been concluded and the book's format is complete as well. Muncy plans to have the writing finished and ready for the publishers by March.

Muncy wrote his first book, Sex and Marriage in Utopian Communities, in 1973. The book has become a popular seller and is currently being translated into Japanese for distribution in that country. The book, which discusses problems that people face in utopian communities, resulted in Muncy receiving an invitation from the Israeli government to live in a utopian community for two months.

"I was over there in 1985 and actually lived with the radicals near the border of Lebanon and Israel," Muncy said. The commune in which he lived was called a kibbutz, and the people lived by the utopian belief "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need."

"Communes have no private property," Muncy explained, "and nobody receives wages for their work. Each morning people receive their work assignments by checking a list which is posted for the public to see. When they go into the market, they just take what they need, and though that sounds strange to us, that's just the way a utopian community operates," Muncy said.

During Muncy's stay, fighting along the border was not as frequent or violent as news reports are indicating today, but the situation was tense.

"Guns were everywhere. People on buses and street corners even had guns. I was given instructions on what to do if I heard gun shots fired," he explained. Muncy said that the doors on peoples' homes have locks at both the top and bottom to prevent them from being kicked in during attacks.

Muncy's second book, Searcy, Arkansas — A Frontier Town Grows Up, was written in 1976 with the help of a government grant. After 18 months of research, Muncy had compiled enough information to fill six filing cabinets. One year after its publication, the book received the national merit award from the National Association of State and Local Histories.

"Of all the biographical accounts written about cities or states during that year, Searcy's was judged the best," Muncy said.

In addition to the books that Muncy is responsible for authoring himself, he has written chapters in 12 other books.

Will Muncy find time to return to write yet another book?

"I probably will. I don't have time right now to do the extensive research that is required. After I retire, though, I'll have time."

As Muncy completed that sentence, a broad smile appeared across his face, an indication that book number four is already being formulated and planned by this busy educator.

Acceptance Rate To Law Schools Is Perfect; Rate Maintained For Over 24 Years

Vanderbilt, Duke, Virginia, Stanford, Texas, Denver...the list of prominent university law schools that have favorably received Harding graduates into their law programs continues to grow.

The statistics on the law school acceptance rate for Harding students are quite impressive. Every Harding graduate who has applied to law school has been admitted. Dr. Ray Muncy, chairman of Harding's history and social sciences department, said the university has never had a student who wanted to attend law school that was not accepted. "We've had two or three that didn't get their first choice, but they were accepted at other schools," he said.

Muncy points out that there may be other schools which have a 100 percent acceptance rate. Harding, though, has consistently held that percentage. The figure has remained perfect during the 24 years that Muncy has been department chairman, and he believes it was likely at 100 percent before he began keeping records.

Harding's success in this area is aided by Muncy's membership in the Southwest Association of Pre-Law Advisors, an organization in San Antonio, Texas, that he helped form 13 years ago. The organization holds conventions and meetings which are attended by deans from university law schools. Muncy attends these meetings, and he is able to talk with the deans from schools throughout the United States to see what they are currently searching for in law students. Muncy is then able to come back to Harding and relay the information to his students.

Harding's pre-law club, the Barristers, is another factor that gives students a competitive edge. The club enables students to visit law schools and offers a first hand view of the opportunities and requirements which lie ahead for them.

Harding is also set apart by its high Law School Admissions Test student scores and by its graduates who are at the top of their classes at prominent law schools. All of these factors have given Harding an excellent reputation among law schools throughout the nation.

Mark Elrod gives his students a global perspective in his international relations classes.

Fuller Attributes Success To Harding

Nineteen years ago Harry Fuller graduated from Harding, and, with diploma in hand, he began the search for that first post-college job. The path he has taken since that time has been varied and has led him to his current position as a personnel supervisor for General Motors in Alabama.

Fuller, who received a B.A. in history, began his career when he was offered a teaching position in the public school system of Cobb County, Georgia. He says that job would not have been offered had it not been for Harding's excellent reputation and standing.

"I'm positive that my first job was a result of receiving my college education at Harding. The man who hired me told me later that he had checked out Harding and found out what the school stood for," Fuller said, "and that was just the beginning of the positive influence Harding has had on my life," he stated.

After teaching four years in public schools and two years for the military, Fuller decided to make a career change. For the past 13 years, he has worked with the Saginaw division of General Motors. He is currently the supervisor of human resources management, which is quite a step up from when the corporation first hired him as an hourly employee.

Little time elapsed before Fuller was promoted to supervisor of hourly employees. Following that advancement, he was promoted to the personnel department as director of education and training. Within a period of two years, Fuller had gone from an hourly employee in the warehouse to a job in the personnel office.

He has been in the personnel office for 11 years, and in the position he now holds, he is responsible for job recruiting and for the hiring and transfer of all hourly and salaried employees. He is still involved in the job training aspect, an area in which his previous years of teaching is particularly helpful.

"The most challenging part of this job is the people side of it," Fuller said. "I deal with so many different needs among these employees. Whether it's a personal problem or a work related problem, I try to direct them to a solution or to a source that can help them," he said.

Harry Fuller and his wife, Debra, accept their membership certificate in the President's Council from Floyed Daniel, vice president for university relations.

He is actively involved with an organization that helps place handicapped people in the work force. Fuller also serves on the business advisory committee at John Calhoun College as well as serving on the President's Council at Harding. His time is also spent as chairman of the Lawrence County Vocational Advisory Committee and with an organization called Agape of Alabama which aides foster children. Fuller keeps his teaching skills fresh by occasionally instructing an English class at a junior college in nearby Huntsville.

"I still remember the way Dr. Muncy made history come alive. His teaching ability has always been special to me, and I've told others about it," he said.

Harry Fuller's career path has twisted and turned in many directions since his graduation from Harding, but he still remembers where his pathway started.

"Harding has definitely had a direct influence on my life," Fuller said, "and I do mean a positive one."

History and Social Science A Department of Distinction

Harding's Department of History and Social Science has distinguished itself as a leader in its area of study.

"We furnish the majority of the history professors at Christian universities," department chairman Dr. Ray Muncy said in noting that Harding's history graduates are serving on the faculty of almost every college or university associated with Churches of Christ. The department furnishes teachers for elementary and secondary schools as well.

In addition to the two alumni featured in the accompanying articles, the department has graduates that are serving as museum directors, corporate historians, archivists, authors, publishers, and a state Supreme Court justice.

The success of the department's alumni can be attributed to the efforts of its faculty and its purpose for existence. The department's emphasis is that of giving all students the basic information concerning the social forces and institutions which affect civilizations.

Faculty members are actively involved with the Amnesty International program. Professors visit schools and give lectures as part of their involvement with the organization. Dr. Fred Jewell is the national book reviewer for Phi Alpha Theta, an honorary history society. The society meets monthly to conduct programs which explore different aspects of history. Jewell serves as secretary and treasurer for the organization as well.

According to Muncy, the number of majors in the department usually averages between 80 and 90 students. This year the number is slightly over 90 students. Of that number, 40 percent are history majors, 30 percent are political science and public administration majors and the majority of the remaining number are social science majors since only a few students major in American Studies.

A recent survey showed that the average college student in the United States takes longer than four years to graduate. Janet Reese Thompson was definitely not figured into the sampling for that survey.

Thompson, a 1976 graduate with a B.A. in political science, completed her degree at Harding in only two years. Her high scores on the College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) tests and a session of summer school helped shorten Thompson's college years. It was her own determination, resources and capabilities, though, that helped her excel even further.

One week after her graduation from Harding and three weeks after her 20th birthday, Thompson was already attending law school at the University of Virginia. She completed her law degree in three years, a process which normally takes four years.

Upon achieving her law degree, Thompson joined the staff of Worrell

Newspaper, Inc. as an associate general counsel. In her seven years with the firm, she was involved in litigation for newspapers which the company owned. The workload kept her traveling throughout the nation for two to three weeks each month as she supervised litigation at various trials. She was on call 24 hours a day answering questions for reporters who may have been subpoenaed for court testimony or had questions regarding the often misunderstood subject of libel.

Thompson also conducted lectures and seminars for reporters regarding their First Amendment rights. She held seminars informing employees of their company benefits. With two young children at home, Thompson has curtailed the heavy workload and extensive traveling and is selling real estate on a part-time basis.

Thompson looks back with great respect and admiration for Harding, and especially Dr. Tom Howard, who continues to teach political science courses.

"He was very instrumental in guiding me and helping me make up my mind as to what I needed to do following my graduation from Harding," Thompson said, "and he is still my favorite professor."

Thompson has plans to resume her law career in a few years. She and her husband, John, have two sons, Brooks and Hunter, who are not yet school age. Thompson believes that her part work experience has only served to arouse her curiosity as to what else lies ahead for her to accomplish.

"I miss getting to meet people like I did when I was in the field as a problem solver," Thompson said. She will no doubt be setting a brisk work pace before long, and will be exceeding what any survey may indicate.

Alumna Proves Statistics Don't Apply To Everyone

TAKING STOCK

by William Tucker, attorney
Director of Deferred Giving

This is the time of the year when many people are "taking stock" of their assets. Periodically, it is essential to take an inventory of assets in order to evaluate progress, consider investment opportunities and assess estate planning choices.

Generally, assets fall into one of several categories — cash, fixed return assets, equities, real property, personal property, pensions and insurance.

"Cash" assets are those liquid assets which are readily available for on-going expenses or to cover unexpected emergencies. These generally include checking accounts, savings accounts, certificates of deposit and money market funds. Today, when many financial institutions have experienced instability, special attention should be given to the security of these investments to make sure they are fully insured.

"Fixed return" assets are resources such as corporate bonds, municipal bonds, treasury bills and notes receivable. Typically, these investments pay a fixed rate of return and have little or no growth value.

On the other hand, "equity" assets, such as stocks and stock mutual funds, pay a rate of return based on the performance of a corporation. These assets, often referred to as "equities," include a potential for appreciation or growth in value.

Another category of assets is "real property." Land and permanent structures attached to the land are real property. Your residence and the land on which it is located plus all other land and buildings are real estate. Real estate may provide income in the form of rent and also has potential for growth in value.

Movable items of property are generally classified as "personal property." Automobiles, boats, household furnishings and collectible items such as coins, stamps and works of art are types of personal property.

Retirement benefits such as IRA's, profit sharing plans and pension plans form another very rapidly growing area of assets. The "vested" portion of these retirement plans should be considered in a complete inventory.

Life insurance policies generally acquire cash value and have investment or accumulation features. The current value of those policies should be included in your inventory and when determining the value of your taxable estate, death benefits should be considered.

Taking an annual inventory of your property is a wise project for anyone. For a Christian, it is a preliminary step to exercising good stewardship. Jesus had harsh words for the man who buried his one talent. At the very minimum the talent should have been placed in the bank to draw interest (Mt. 25:27).

Ascertaining the composition and value of one's assets is an essential step to the measurement of financial progress. In addition, a significant change in asset value may require modification of one's estate plan.

If, as a result of taking inventory of your assets, you are inclined to make a change in your estate plan, and if we can be of service to you or your advisor, then please call us toll-free at 1-800-477-4312.

Bill Harris (center), the retiring chairman of the President's Council, is presented a framed Harding watercolor print in appreciation for his three years of service in the leadership role. Helping Harris accept the gift is his wife, Lil. Making the presentation is Gary Chamblee, a Harding alumnus and a Ft. Worth businessman. Chamblee was selected to succeed Harris as chairman of the 500-member council. Chamblee assumed the chairmanship at the group's annual spring meeting in April.

Searcy-White County Campaign Nears $1 Million Goal

Goal Highest Ever Attempted In Home Community

Harding administrators have launched a $1 million Searcy-White County fund drive, the largest single fund raising project ever attempted by the university in its home community.

One hundred business and civic leaders attended a kickoff breakfast to launch the fund drive. At the breakfast President David Burks announced that $600,000 of the $1 million goal had already been pledged by local businessmen. To date more than $725,000 has been pledged.

During the fund drive 125 businessmen will volunteer their time to solicit approximately 650 prospective donors in Searcy and White County. Lott Tucker, Harding's vice president for finance, is coordinating the project.

Harding is seeking five-year pledges in the fund drive. The local project is one phase of the university's five-year Beyond Excellence campaign to raise $25 million in gifts for current capital and operational projects. Thus far the Beyond Excellence campaign has secured more than $12 million in gifts and pledges.

The White County Courthouse in downtown Searcy is a familiar landmark.

Heidi Blair, a sociology major from Upland, Calif., was one of 21 students who participated in a phonathon in October. The students raised $21,366 in gifts and pledges from the 1,981 alumni households contacted.

Kirkman Will Direct Fund Raising Program At Graduate School of Religion

Brett Kirkman has been named Director of Development at the Harding Graduate School of Religion. The announcement of the appointment was made jointly by President David B. Burks and Dean C. Philip Slate.

Kirkman has served as director of the annual fund at Harding. Prior to joining the Harding staff he was director of development for Sonrise Christian School in Covina, Calif.

"Brett did an excellent job in his annual fund work at Harding. I'm certainly pleased he has accepted this new responsibility to direct the multi-faceted fund raising program of the Graduate School of Religion," said Burks.

"The school is involved in a multi-million dollar campaign, and I'm confident Brett can provide the leadership to help make it successful."

Kirkman, 26, is a 1987 Harding University graduate. He received the B.A. degree in public relations and during his senior year was named the outstanding public relations major.

As director of the annual fund at Harding his primary responsibilities were directing the university's phonathon, the direct mail program and volunteer campaigns.

In his new position Kirkman will work closely with Burks, Slate and Floyd Daniel, vice president for university relations, to develop a comprehensive fund raising program that includes both the annual fund and deferred giving.

Chairman 'Snakes' Through Research Sabbatical

by Alice Ann Kellar

Say "Snake" and some folks scream. Mention the word around Professor Michael Plummer, his eyes light up and his brain starts churning. Very likely he's just come up with another ecology research project he'd like to undertake.

That opportunity was afforded him this year through a six-month sabbatical at the prestigious Savannah River Ecology Laboratory (SREL), the University of Georgia research facility located near Augusta. Stemming from a 1986 seminar he presented at SREL, one of the leading ecology research labs in the world, Plummer was invited to be a visiting scientist beginning in July.

"Basically, I was invited because of snake ecology research I had done at Harding," he said, explaining his good fortune. From July through September, he worked at the facility with top personnel in the field, collecting, writing and analyzing data. During the time, he met Dr. Eugene Odom, considered the father of modern ecology, and many other leading scientists.

Plummer's work involved measuring the metabolic rates of snakes in the field by measuring the rate of their use of doubly-labeled water. To start the project, Plummer implanted radio transmitters in nine black snakes, also known as 'racers.' The snakes were caught, fitted with the miniature transmitters, complete with under-the-skin antennae, and freed.

Plummer and the research technician available to him full time recorded the behavior of each, noting where they moved, when they shed, when they fed, etc. Most importantly, they measured the change in ratio of tritium and isotopic oxygen in the doubly-labeled water.

Now that he's back at his office, the 1967 Harding alumnus who reportedly kept a snake or two in his dormitory room is bubbling with enthusiasm. "I enjoyed it so thoroughly," he said, "and my mind is stimulated so much, it's just buzzing with new ideas and information." As he talked in the herpetology lab in the Pryor Science Center, four green snakes were poised on chicken wire nearby, waiting to be used in a classroom demonstration next semester.

The biology department chairman can't remember

Back on campus after a semester of research at the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory, Mike Plummer makes preparation for the classroom. Results of his research will be incorporated into his lectures, particularly through slides he made with the nine racers he studied. Because of lack of time needed to maintain and care for a large supply of snakes, his inventory now only contains four green snakes that will also have their turn as classroom projects.

when he wasn't fascinated with 'critters' such as snakes and turtles. His enjoyment is no less intense even today, for he feels his work is just "doing the same thing I did when I was a kid growing up in northern Alabama. I still enjoy it just as much as I did then. I'm grateful that my parents loved me enough to tolerate it." His wife, Sharon ('71) and children, Melissa, a Harding freshman, and Scott, a junior at Harding Academy, share in his fascination, although to a somewhat lesser degree.

Because of his work at SREL, Plummer has already been invited to return. He has been awarded an Oak Ridge Associated University Research Travel Contract to fund travel for further research at SREL.

Too, he has been invited to present seminars at Southeastern Louisiana University in Hammond and the University of Central Arkansas. He will attend a pit viper seminar symposium at the University of Texas in Arlington.

Another bonus, he feels, is the occasion to open the door for current Harding students for graduate study at the top-notch research lab. The popular teacher is always eager to assist his students in finding out what they desire to do and being willing to put forth the effort to help them find their niche.

For himself, he's thinking about a population of pygmy cottonmouths he knows of on Capers Island near Charleston, S. C. He fears, however, that Hurricane Hugo may have destroyed them, and he's eager to get there to see what has happened.

"It thrills me," he said, "to learn more of this world God created. The biology of God's creatures is of special significance to a Christian scientist." One is convinced he means it to the fullest.

Theme for 1990 Lectureship Will Study I Corinthians

The book, Mitchell feels, deals with any problem today's church faces. "A look at First Corinthians will be a very contemporary thing," he said.

Rick Atchley of Ft. Worth was one of the speakers during the four-day lectureship program.

The addition this year of a large tent in front of Hammon Student Center proved valuable for displays of vendors, and Mitchell said a larger tent would be used next year. The Searcy chapter of Associated Women for Harding operated a booth with coffee and pastries. That practice will be continued also, Mitchell said.

Eddie C. Cloer, an associate professor of Bible who has served as director of the series for the past seven years, resigned as director effective at the close of the 1989 series. He and his wife, Susan, were presented a certificate in recognition of their hard and productive work through the years.

Mitchell said that his replacement would be as a full-time Church Relations Coordinator, currently being sought for the College of Bible and Religion. Applications for the position are being received and interviewing will begin in January.

The 1990 program will again open on Sunday night with a lecture in Benson Auditorium. Classes, workshops and lectures will continue Monday through Wednesday with a closing session Wednesday night, again at Benson Auditorium. Further information and details will be announced.

Open House '89 Combines Successful Weekend Programs

A combination of a high school day and Parents' Weekend formed Open House '89 which was held the weekend of Oct. 6-7.

Marking only the second time the two events had been combined, Open House '89 gave the university's Alumni and Admissions Offices a totally different format to present to prospective students and parents of current students.

"We decided to emphasize ACT preparation and explain the financial aid process," said Admissions Services Director Jim White. "We combined the two events because many of the parents who have children enrolled at Harding still have other children at home who are prospective students," he said.

Carter Lambert, Alumni Relations Director, said the response from parents had been very positive.

"Parents had told us they wanted to experience in a small way what their children are experiencing as students," Lambert said. With that in mind, the Alumni Office gave parents the opportunity to visit with students and faculty members and to attend several classes. They were also given an update on the university.

Approximately 1,100 visitors from as far away as Florida attended the event and its activities which gave a well-rounded view of Harding's services and the opportunities the university offers.

A full schedule of activities included a continental breakfast and bar-b-que dinner for parents, a pizza party for students, a traditional lily pool devotional, a concert by Harding alumnus and Star Search winner David Slater, a football game in which the Bisons defeated Arkansas Tech and an all-school party which followed the game.

"Overall, we think it was a great success because we had so many positive comments," said Don Starks, assistant director of admissions.

Open House '90, which will again be a joint effort between the two offices, is scheduled for Oct. 5-6, 1990.

Chasing the leaders are Lady Bison harriers Jenny Cole (41) and Margaret Eoff (44).

Harding Continues Dominance in AIC Cross Country

Harding's dominance in cross country never looked better as both the Bisons and Lady Bisons won Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference/NAIA District 17 titles, Nov. 7 at Magnolia, Ark.

The Bisons and Lady Bisons earned all-conference and all-district recognition to pace their teams to victory, including individual winners Melynda Cordry and Jon Murray.

"It was a very satisfying win in both races," said coach Ted Lloyd, whose teams have now won 19 consecutive men's and four straight women's titles. "Our kids, on a scale from one to 10, probably ran an eight, nine or 10. We did what it took to win."

Cordry paced the Lady Bisons to a convincing victory. With six Harding runners finishing in the top 10, the Lady Bisons scored 24 points in the AIC competition to outdistance second place UA-Monticello's 74 points. Arkansas College was third with 76, followed by University of the Ozarks with 86, Hendrix College with 103 and Arkansas Tech with 130. UA-Little Rock altered the District 17 results by finishing between Hendrix and ATU in team standings, but the Lady Bisons still blew past UAM and Arkansas College, 27-83, to win that trophy as well.

The Bisons were equally impressive as a team. Harding won the men's competition with 34 points, followed by Ouachita Baptist with 68, UA-Monticello with 73, Henderson State with 95, Central Arkansas with 112, Southern Arkansas with 148, University of the Ozarks with 203 and Hendrix College with 204.

Cordry, who won her first title as a freshman in 1986

before finishing runner-up as a sophomore and junior to teammate Cheryl Bednosky, set a blistering pace on Southern Arkansas University's hilly five-kilometer course. The senior from Gresham, Ore., outdistanced the pack with a time of 18:44.

Sophomore Kelsie Hutchinson ran a solid second place time of 20:10. Next for the Lady Bisons was freshman Jenny Cole, in seventh place with a time of 21:41. Senior Margaret Eoff was eighth in 21:49, followed by senior Carrie White, ninth in 21:52, and sophomore Chandra Latimer, 10th in 22:13. Sophomore Laura Dillman wrapped up the Lady Bison runners with a time of 27:47.

Murray, a senior from Carthage, Mo., defended his title in grand style as well, stretching a short, early lead into a commanding one by the time he completed the eight-kilometer loop. Murray's time was 25:45, more than a minute ahead of second place David Briggs of UAM.

Freshman Tony Davis, Cordry's younger brother, was third in 26:48, followed by sophomore Allen Gill, seventh in 27:31; sophomore Mark Halbert, 10th in 27:54; junior Ken Edwards, 13th in 28:26; senior Rick Trujillo, 14th in 28:31; and sophomore Greg Richey, 22nd in 29:15.

Lloyd praised Cordry and Murray for their performances. "They ran just super, especially under the conditions. Melynda has run some outstanding races this year, including this one. Jon ran a very tactical race. He knew he would be hard pressed, but he took advantage of the downhill slopes to increase the margin. He excels on that kind of course."

Linebacker Chose Harding; Expresses No Regrets

by Donna Lampkin
Arkansas Gazette

Football brought John Spann to Harding University three years ago, but he will leave with his focus changed.

Five football players from tiny Ouachita Christian Academy in Monroe, La., signed college scholarships in 1986.

Out of a senior class of 42, Michael Shepherd and Steve Hudson went to Arkansas, Sol Graves wound up at Louisiana State and Casino Smith signed with Northwestern (La.) State.

Spann picked Harding. Ouachita Christian won Louisiana's Class A state championship in 1985. The Eagles capped their 14-0 season with the final game in the Superdome in New Orleans.

Spann, a 5-foot-10, 205-pound linebacker, had a lot to do with it. In high school, winning the state championship was the most important thing in the world. I was eaten up by football. I knew Harding wasn't as big-time football as I couldn't have gone to, but I came, I guess for reasons other than football."

Chief among the reasons was Harding's reputation for stressing academics. Spann has accumulated a 3.5 grade point average in a general science major. After graduation in May, he plans to go on to dental school.

Spann sees some similarities in his work in the classroom and on the field.

"Football lays the groundwork for dedication and a thousand intangibles," he said. "The discipline of the game and athletics, the concentration, definitely lead over into your academic sacks for minus nine yards; made five fumble recoveries and three interceptions; and broken up nine passes. In two games this season, he has registered 14 tackles and 16 assists, including a sack for minus eight yards; and has broken up one pass.

"The number one thing about John is his attitude," Harding coach Larry Richmond said. "He is a leader by example as well as by his actions. What he brings to us is not just on the field production. It's his classroom performance and his interaction with the students and faculty. He is very visible on campus."

Spann keeps in touch with his high school teammates. He watched Shepherd and Hudson last spring in practice in Fayetteville.

"I know I could play for bigger schools, but I have to look at the other things I have," Spann said. "Those teams take a whole lot more of their time. In major college, you have to pay the price. It's harder on them to keep up their schoolwork. Here, the football team is just another part of Harding. It makes it easy to have a social life and to get with your academics. You can get involved in so many things. Harding makes it easier to be more well-rounded in a lot of areas."

Ronnie Huckleba was one of the influential Harding connections at Ouachita Christian. He played at Harding, and was co-head coach at OCA. After Spann chose Harding, Huckleba had the opportunity to return to his alma mater as a coach.

"I've coached John since he was in the eighth grade, and he's always been a mature kid," Huckleba said.

Three years later, Spann is still pleased with his choice.

"I have built those friendships, those relationships, I wanted to," he said. "I've gotten a great education. I consider myself a good person, but I wanted to be in an atmosphere I felt comfortable in and that would help me. I haven't regretted one bit of it. It's lived up to every expectation."

Senior linebacker John Spann has been a leader both in the classroom and on the field.

doubled at fullback in high school. He was named the Offensive Most Valuable Player in the final.

"I was the smallest one of the guys who got offered scholarships," Spann said. "I had different reasons, but the main reason I came to Harding was some of my coaches had played here, and they told us some stuff about how Harding influenced them. I wanted that."

"I knew football wasn't going to be the thing that sustains me. I knew I wanted lifelong friendships, and the Christian influence performance. I've taken pride in keeping my grades up."

His college GPA is higher than the 3.3 he posted in high school.

"When you get here, this is for real," Spann said. "You've got to get a job sometime. Your priorities and ideas about things change. I can't say football's not important, because it is. But it's not the most important thing like it was in high school."

In three seasons at Harding, Spann has recorded 314 tackles, including six for minus 25 yards and three

Unpredictable Season Surprises Everyone

Bisons Win AIC Championship; Earn Spot in NAIA National Playoffs

by Ken Bissell

No one predicted it, but everyone was a believer in the end.

In what some have called its greatest moment ever, the Bison football team wrapped up the regular season by whipping the nation's top ranked squad, thus claiming a share of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title, and clinching a first-ever bid to the NAIA Division I playoffs.

If there ever was one, the Bisons were the "Cinderella story" of the state's sports scene.

"There's no way to explain how great this season has been for us," said head coach Larry Richmond, who led his team to the title in only his second season. "No one ever gave us a chance to be in a position to compete for it, yet we somehow defied the odds. Our kids and our assistant coaches deserve all of the credit."

The Bisons completed the regular season with a 7-3 record overall, 5-1 in AIC play, and ranked ninth in the NAIA's final poll. It's the highest ranking for the Bisons since 1972, when they finished sixth.

Harding will meet Emporia State University in Emporia, Kan., in the quarterfinals of the playoffs. The Hornets were the Bisons' season-opening opponent and claimed a 5-0 victory in that contest.

Because of press deadlines, the results of that game and possible future playoff games will be included in the next issue.

Though one game cannot make an entire season, the contest that perhaps will be remembered most is the season finale against the University of Central Arkansas. It had been 13 long years since the Bisons had knocked off the Bears, which ironically gave them a share of the league title, their last.

The stage was set in Conway on a cold, Thursday night. More than 2,000 Harding fans packed UCA's Estes Stadium on Nov. 16. Although they were outnumbered two to one, they made up for it by standing the duration of the game and cheering their team.

On the field, the Bisons nipped the Bears at every opportunity. UCA quarterbacks threw six interceptions, while the Bear backs lost two fumbles. Meanwhile, the Bisons took advantage of the miscues for a dramatic 16-11 victory.

The win sent shockwaves throughout the state because of UCA's dominance in recent years. The Bears had won 25 consecutive AIC games, spanning over five seasons, and were victorious in 38 straight regular season games. They were ranked atop the regular season poll in all but three weeks through the last two years. Their co-championship with the Bisons was their seventh straight.

The successful ending came to a season in which the Bisons were to compete for the cellar of the conference. In more than one preseason poll Harding was picked seventh and last.

The schedule opened against perennially tough Emporia State, a playoff participant the last two seasons. In a game whose score resembled a baseball game, the Hornets repelled the Bison offense and tallied just enough on the scoreboard for a 5-0 victory.

Harding bounced back with a 10-9 win over Evangel College in Springfield, Mo., but Southeastern Oklahoma State handed the Bisons their second loss in week three with a 7-3 deficit.

It was then that the things began to turn for the Bisons.

In week four, a dormant Harding offense came to life with a 34-0 shutout against Lane College. In the conference opener, the Bison defense held Arkansas Tech in a game-ending goal line stand for a 17-11 win. The following week, on the road, the Bisons began to draw some attention with a tough 15-6 victory over Henderson State University.

An overflow Homecoming crowd came away disappointed as UA-Monticello seemingly took any conference title hopes away with a 21-3 setback.

Southern Arkansas and Ouachita Baptist challenged before falling 30-17 and 17-6, respectively, to set up the showdown in Conway.

The 1976 season proved to be a motivator for the team, not only for the UCA game, but throughout the seasons. Harding assistant coaches Randy Tribble, Ronnie Huckeba and James Frank were among 18 seniors who led the Bisons to their last AIC crown.

"We started comparing the two seasons from the very beginning," said Tribble. "We were 1-2 after three games that year, and we were 1-2 starting this season. We kicked off the AIC schedule both years with an upset win, and we were beaten both years by a team that shouldn't have beaten us."

The irony was completed when the Bisons upset the Bears in the final game to claim the title. "It's strange how the two seasons parallel," said Huckeba. "It was like (the three assistant coaches) were living the 1976 season all over again."

Following the regular season, several Bisons were recognized for their play. Sophomore linebacker Patrick Gill was named the AIC's Defensive Player of the Year and All-AIC. Also earning all-conference honors were senior wide receiver Mike Alexander of Duncan, Okla.; senior center Fred Wiley of Houston, Texas; junior cornerback Lance Rodgers of Ponca City, Okla.; and junior defensive end Kenwick Thompson of Houston. Richmond was voted the AIC Coach of the Year by the league's coaches.

Volleyball Team Claims Championship

by Ken Bissell

In a season that was filled with many exciting moments, the Lady Bison volleyball squad claimed a share of the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference title and fought to the wire for a national playoff berth before falling just short of that goal.

Coach Karyl Bailey's squad surprised everyone by capturing its first league championship in the school's history. The Lady Bisons breezed through their schedule to post a 43-8 record overall, 11-1 in AIC play.

"It was truly an outstanding year for us," said Bailey, who received AIC and NAIA District 17 Coach of the Year honors for the first time. "We steadily improved as a team, and we did it without a senior. That really makes us excited about the future."

The conference race ended with a classical battle against highly ranked Southern Arkansas on the Lady Bisons' home court. SAU entered with an unblemished AIC record, and the Lady Bisons had one loss, coming at the hands of the Riderettes. A crowd estimated at 1,900 saw the Lady Bisons defeat the Riderettes in three games for a share of the title. It may be the largest crowd to ever see a volleyball game in the conference and possibly the state.

"It was the most incredible thing I've ever seen," Bailey said of the audience. "They were the big difference. It was our best all-around match."

By virtue of their seedings, the Lady Bisons and Riderettes were paired off in opposite brackets in the NAIA District 17 tournament in Magnolia. The two met in the championship match, with a bid to a bi-district round and possible NAIA playoff berth riding on the outcome.

Postseason honors were presented to (from left): Kelly Willingham of Hurst, Texas; Stephanie Dempsay of Bedford, Tex.; Coach Karyl Bailey; Tammy Todd of Raytown, Mo., and Susan Malone of Germantown, Tenn., at the conclusion of the NAIA District 17 volleyball tournament.

The Lady Bisons jumped out to a 2-1 lead and were within a handful of points of pulling out the upset, but the Riderettes rallied in the final two games to take the match. The scores were (with Harding points first) 15-11, 6-15, 15-11, 10-15, 5-15.

"We took them five sets once before this season. It was a great match," Bailey said of the championship battle. "I was proud of the way our girls played. They knew SAU would be the toughest opponent we'd play all season."

In addition to Bailey's award, four Lady Bisons received postseason recognition. Sophomores Susan Malone of Memphis and Tammy Todd of Raytown, Mo., garnered All-AIC and All-NAIA District 17 honors. Junior Kelly Willingham of Hurst, Texas, was named to the All-AIC squad, while fellow junior Stephanie Dempsay of Bedford, Texas, received All-District 17 laurels.

Cage Teams Open Seasons

The Bison and Lady Bison basketball teams tipped off their seasons with convincing home victories.

Senior guards Corey Camper and David James poured in 16 points each to lead the Bisons to a 73-60 win over School of the Ozarks. In women's play, Searcy freshman center Nancee Wilson blitzed Christian Brothers College for 18 points and a school-record 20 rebounds to lead the Lady Bisons to a 66-49 win over the Lady Buccaneers.

Defense was the key for the Bisons as they held School of the Ozarks scoreless through the first seven minutes of the second half. Coming out of the halftime locker room deadlocked at 33-33, the Bisons reeled off the first 11 points of the final period and stretched the margin to as much as 16 points in the closing minutes.

Sean French added 14 points for the Bisons. Chris Larson led the Bobcats with 22 points.

Wilson may have set a trend for her career with her outstanding performance. The 6-2 local star converted a three-point play to score the Lady Bisons' first points of the season, and went on to dominate on both ends of the floor. CBC kept it close on good hustle through the opening minutes of the second half, but Wilson and senior guard Carrie White shut down the Lady Bucs with good defense and accurate shooting.

White supported Wilson with 15 points. Monica House also scored 15 points to lead CBC.

Junior guard Michael Wood of Judsonia, Ark., splits two School of the Ozarks defenders in the Bisons' 73-60 season-opening win.

Alumnus Discovers New Plant Species

*(Reprinted from

Some botanists work all their lives without great discovery, but Vernon Bates (BA '71) has the honor naming two previously unknown species of Arkansas plants.

Bates, 40, of Mena hit the jackpot after he worked from April 1988 until October taking inventory of plants in the Ouachita National Forest.

Bates and a colleague, Dr. Bert Pittman, found a tall, bushy plant with a lemon-like fragrance that no botanist had ever come across. They found it this fall on their last day in the field.

"It's very rare to find anything new in the eastern United States today," Bates said.

The 5- to 6-foot-tall plant has daisy-like petals and grows on novaculite deposits on one mountain in the forest, Bates said. "It grows right on top of the boulders," he said.

Bates and Pittman decided to name it Polymnia cossatotensis, or Cossatot leafcup.

While on the project, Bates worked under contract to the Arkansas Nature Conservancy, which in turn was under contract to the U.S. Forest Service.

Bates also found a small herb he decided to name

Hydrophyllum tedbrownei, or Browne's waterleaf, in honor of Dr. Ted Browne, an emeritus professor at Memphis State University.

Browne, an accomplished botanist who retired early because of multiple sclerosis, inspired him and directed the work on his master's degree, Bates said.

The waterleaf grows eight to 10 inches tall on a stalk topped by a ball of flowers, Bates said. It is found along the banks of the Caddo River in areas that are rarely flooded.

A paper Bates and Pittman wrote on the Cossatot leafcup has been accepted for publication in a scientific journal in November, Bates said.
